

Noon, Thursday, August 21, 2014

The Value Added Proposition for Food Grade and Specialty Grains including Organics

Guest:
Wyatt Muse
Clarkson Grain Company

The Value Added Proposition for Food Grade and Specialty Grains including Organics:
Opportunities for Farmers, Distributors, and Processors.

Wyatt Muse is the merchant from Clarkson Grain who specializes in specialty and organic commodities. The discussion will focus on the issues around production, supply, demand and distribution of specialty and organic commodities and how it is changing over the next few years.

Identity Preserved (IP) grains are contracted for specific uses including food grade, animal feed, and industrial uses. Variety specific production can result in higher margins for farmers as well as improved process efficiency for end users. Central Illinois is a hotbed of IP production due to the rich soil and proximity to markets via railroads, river system, and container exports.

<http://www.clarksongrain.com/>